VIRGINIA BEACH, Virginia, January 30, 2019

(Newswire.com) - Earlier this month, Oris released the newest addition to the watchmaker's ProDiver line: the Dive Control Limited Edition timepiece. Before its worldwide release on January 6th, the Swiss brand took to Vail, Colorado to demonstrate the watch's water resistance at 1,000 meters.

The Dive Control Limited Edition is hard to miss on the wrist, with its 51 mm titanium case, bright yellow rubber strap, and the same yellow hue adorning the dial. The watch case is covered in black diamond-like carbon to maintain a sleek, sporty look. Also prominent is Oris' patented Rotation Safety System (RSS), which prevents the rotating bezel from moving during a dive.

According to the Hölstein-based maker, only 500 models of this watch will be available, making the Dive Control Limited Edition a must-buy for avid fans of Oris' diving watch collections.

Other popular divers watches include the sleek Aquis Date Relief, the vintage silhouette of the Divers Sixty-Five, as well as a Divers Sixty-Five model with a recycled plastic strap to bring attention to the fight against plastic waste.
