The World's Most Accurate Health Score Built by Doctors and Researchers

Vivametrica was founded by doctors and researchers on the idea that health data, exercise, and our smartphones/wearables could provide important insights about our overall health and wellness. Since then, millions of data points have been collected to power the world's most accurate health assessment score - the vScore. Vivametrica uses the score and their technology to develop actionable and personalized insights for each individual.

Their health score gives people the tools to manage their own health and wellness. They educate and guide them in their journey to make incremental changes to their behavior for long term health.

Vivametrica is the global standard in predictive health data analytics using mobile and wearable device data, artificial intelligence protocols and scientifically validated models, to accurately predict mortality and disease risk.

Wellness Program Results Made Real

Accuracy

The health risk assessment only needs 5 pieces of information to create an accurate score. The more information a user provides them, the more accurate their score will be. Their data is clinically valid and evidence-based.

Holistic Wellness

They make sense of multiple inputs that they receive from an individual. Their proprietary algorithms and technologies provide personalized insights on holistic wellness specifically for that person.

Personalized

They use their deep understanding of precision medicine. With so much clinical data on the whole population, they can compare people to other people just like them.

Education

They give the individual the knowledge to know themselves better and make incremental changes in their day to day lives to influence their long-term health.
