Hungry Harvest to Celebrate Launch of Produce Delivery on Mission to Repair Broken Food System with Ashley Christensen

Raleigh, NC, January, 2018 – This country has a major food problem. About 40 percent of food goes to waste and 66,500 acres of fields are left unharvested each year. In North Carolina alone, 1.2 million tons of food is wasted annually while 1 in 4 children live in food insecurity. Hungry Harvest, a farm to doorstep produce delivery service, enters the Triangle market January 13 to bring solutions to these food waste and hunger problems.

Hungry Harvest, a startup featured on Shark Tank, believes every person has the right to eat healthy and every fruit and vegetable deserves to be eaten. Its inspiring mission to end food waste and hunger in the US starts by rescuing delicious produce that farmers can't otherwise sell due to cosmetic imperfections or surpluses. This rescued produce is curated into weekly customizable produce shares and delivered directly to subscribers starting at just $16. Every harvest delivery saves at least 10 pounds of food from going to waste and supports the work of local hunger-solving organizations.

To officially kick off the launch, Hungry Harvest is partnering with James Beard award-winning Chef Ashley Christensen for their Triangle Press event at Bridge Club, Thursday, January 25th, at 2pm. Attendees will have the opportunity to meet Chef Christensen, "shop" the pop-up farmers market and create a complimentary mini harvest of fresh produce to take home at the Build a Box station. Join them for small plates curated by Bridge Club, produce delights and a complimentary Hungry Harvest box customized by you!

New customers can use the code HEALTHYNC to save $5 on their first order at hungryharvest.net.

About Hungry Harvest

Hungry Harvest is a farm to doorstep produce delivery service that since our appearance on Shark Tank (and deal with investor Robert Herjavec) has cut deeply into unnecessary food waste and hunger.
