

Yahoo! Games Creators Launch Plato 1.0

PRESS RELEASE NOV 8, 2017 03:00 PST

Games & chat app exits beta with over 1 million downloads for iOS and Android.

San Jose, California, November 8, 2017 (Newswire.com) - Plato, a startup made up of the creators of the original Yahoo! Games, is excited to announce that it is launching the 1.0 version of its free mobile app worldwide today. Plato lets people play a curated suite of multiplayer games instantly while chatting with anyone on both iOS and Android.

After building Yahoo! Games to become the #1 web games portal in the early 2000s, the team reunited at Plato in 2014 and is continuing the mission of bringing people closer together through games.

Plato's version 1.0 was built upon the success of Plato's soft launch which saw over 1.5M downloads. Since then over 8M games have been completed and 30M messages have been sent by people using the app.

Plato now has 19 true multiplayer games including fan favorites like Pool, Draw Together, Ocho, Sea Battle, and Ludo with more always being added. Players can play in multiple modes such as live, turn-based or via ranked leaderboards. Plus, Plato offers private, group, and public chat rooms to let people connect and socialize while playing.

The team at Plato also has a strict philosophy of keeping the gameplay and social experience pure by not offering any pay-to-win gimmicks, or distracting ads within the app.

"Mobile gaming has become isolating, messy and filled with dubious monetization tactics. We believe the best games are the ones that bring people closer together. That's why we created Plato - the best app for playing games and chatting with anyone. It's a clean, social, and pure experience that is ad-free and will never be pay-to-win. People say it's refreshing. We say it's about time."
