Innovation Series to feature the life.ai digital city operating system

Denver, CO —An upcoming episode of Innovations w/Ed Begley Jr. will feature life.ai digital city operating system, a platform dedicated to providing a turnkey hyper-localized economy that supports small business, education and the community in a sustainable way.

The Life.ai platform was developed with the Future in mind. The Digital City technology can be tailored for any community. Our initial projects include The Meridian Group's The Boro $1B development at Tyson's Corner and Gramercy District, a $700M mixed use transit-oriented development on Ashburn Station by 22 Capital Partners. Connecting these communities and others along the silver line will create a walkable urban lifestyle. The turn key platform will become the foundation for urban life. These projects will be highlighted on the upcoming television series.

"We are excited to deliver our game changing Digital City Operating System starting in 2019 with great real estate partners like 22 Capital Partners and The Meridian Group," says Dave Ladouceur, chief executive officer of life.ai. "Creating the world's best experiences and interactions is what we live for — the best experience powered by AI that learns and adapts to your needs, helps you, connects people with unlimited potential to improve living using the world's only citizen-centered privacy-first model."

"Our dream team is implementing the next generation digital city," says Minh Le, chief executive officer of 22 capital partners. "Leading pioneers like life.ai our joint venture partner with citylink.ai are laying the foundation for digital cities of the future."

Starting with mixed-use environments and scaling to education hubs and suburban areas will lay the foundation of a hyper-localized economy. Each citizen and business has access to our digital city architecture with AI, IoT and a personalized environment. A model where you can create great experiences with efficiency and sustainability and escape big-data. The only privacy-first smart city model in the world - your life, your business, your way.
