

GRUNGO LAW ADDS RETIRED FBI AGENT AS INVESTIGATOR

"Mike Elton joins Grungo Law to lead investigations in client cases."

CHERRY HILL, NEW JERSEY – One of New Jersey and Pennsylvania's leading personal injury trial law firms is adding a 25-year veteran of law enforcement to their ranks. Mike Elton joins Grungo Law, with offices throughout NJ and in Philadelphia, as an Investigator for client cases.

"Mike is a tremendous addition to the firm," said Rich Grungo, Jr., Esq, founder of Grungo Law. "We recently moved to expand our clients' needs by adding data breach and cybersecurity litigation to our practice areas, so adding a former FBI agent with the type of experience Mike has, provides us some real firepower for our clients."

Elton served 21 years in the FBI, with 7 years of FBI supervisory experience at FBI headquarters and in the field. He most notably managed several high-profile white-collar and financial crime investigations in his tenure with the FBI. Elton also has a distinguished track record of service with the Atlantic County (NJ) Prosecutor's Office and distinguished service as an Officer in the United States Navy – Active Duty and Reserves.

Elton says, "The need for in-depth investigation is crucial for the type of cases we see at Grungo Law. This is a perfect opportunity to marry the strength of Grungo Law's legal team with the power of investigative expertise."

Grungo Law's caseload consists of complex and high-profile cases due to Richard Grungo's prowess as an attorney Certified by the Supreme Court of New Jersey as a Civil Trial Attorney."

Grungo adds, "After 25 years of bringing cases to verdict, I know how critical early and comprehensive investigation is to obtain a successful result." "We have a duty to our clients to give them the best opportunity of success, and the addition of a retired FBI agent with the skills Mike has makes our already strong firm that much stronger."
