Endemic Poverty in East Africa has made the problems with access to education, endangered animal conservation, and gender equality interconnected. NIDO's elegant and multistage approach improves access to education for children and youth regardless of gender, supports the protection of endangered animals while fighting against climate change, and provides the means for a better future.

A caring handshake comes from both sides. NIDO empowers communities by increasing access to basic services, with focuses on education for children & youth irrespective of genders, cleaner energy alternatives, and assistance in the financing of local start-up business in Uganda. In exchange for this, Ugandan wildlife conservation rangers and community members commit to the better protection of endangered animals and assist in the building of critical infrastructure that benefits the community. This powerful partnership helps support the 4 E's of access to Education, Environmental protection, gender Equality and social Economic self-sustenance in a lasting way.

NIDO STORIES

I am Nakate Flavia Priscilla and I am 23 years old. I have written this story to tell you about my journey in the performing arts.

I began studying at Cambridge Secondary School in 2016 and performing with the Suubi Fusion Troupe. During my time with Suubi, I have been able to complete senior high school and travel to Canada as a part of their tour after completing my O level schooling.

My journey started at 5 years of age when I was invited to perform as part of a speech by our guest of honor, Mr. Kawaya Moses. Shortly after, Mr. Moses invited me to join his performing arts group, the Sanyu African Music and Dramatic Society (SAMADs). I performed with the SAMADs for almost 7 years.

In 2012, I joined St Catherine Secondary School Nabbingo and I participated in a National Music, Dance and Drama Festival. In 2014, I was awarded best female dancer. My lead instructors were from the SUUBI FUSION TROUPE and they helped fund my school fees.

I studied up to P.2 and was recruited for music. Soon after, I moved to Kyengera St. Peter's Junior School for P. 3 in 2014 until I finished P.7 in 2018.

How NIDO's Conservation Plan Works

Uganda, one of the poorest countries in the world, does not provide universal/public access to basic services like primary education. Ugandan conservation rangers, working at the front lines of endangered animal conservation and tasked with the reporting of poachers, endure risky conditions and are poorly paid. They cannot afford to pay to educate their children.

In order to offer their children a better life they often turn to an alternate source of revenue – poachers. Through bursaries and school building the NEXIM International Development Organization (NIDO) provides free schooling to the children of conservation rangers if they commit to reporting poachers, while not assisting poachers in their activities. Similarly, the members of the local community who share the ecosystem with the wildlife receive a free education if they commit to reporting poachers. In the last step of this conservation effort, children of poachers are welcomed to the school if their parents give up poaching.

NIDO members who work with conservation rangers then monitor to make sure these commitments by conservation rangers, the community, and reformed poachers are upheld. This education is offered equally to both girls and boys. This innovative solution takes apart the framework of poaching at a systemic level.
