Author Bio

Pete Nunweiler is an emerging multi-genre author whose talent includes motivational self-development, a memoir and fiction. He has the keen ability to capture emotion in his writing through relatable characters and experiences.

One of the most unique tidbits about Pete's writing is that all of his books tie together somehow. When writing his memoir, One Hundred Seventy Days, he practiced the 5 Waters of Success that he teaches in How Much Water Do We Have?: 5 Success Principles to Conquer Any Challenge and Thrive in Times of Change. In his fiction series, The Ghost Between Us, the first four chapters have been described as very emotional and are based on his experiences from his memoir.

Somewhere in The Ghost Between Us trilogy, a situation the main characters are in will show up in a future fiction story, but Pete won't reveal additional information.

Book Bio

You'll quickly connect with the characters in this captivating paranormal thriller. With a cliff hanger at the close of every chapter, you won't want to put it down.

Toby Miller just hung up the phone with his wife, Anna twenty minutes ago. When it rings again, the voice calling from his wife's phone isn't Anna. "Mister Miller, your wife's been in an accident."

Toby makes a promise to honor Anna's last wish that he carries out their dream of living in the mountains of Tennessee, follow his own goals and, as paranormal enthusiasts, to "keep chasing ghosts."

When he settles into his "Forever House," the house is anything but settled. Instead of chasing ghosts on investigations, he's the one being chased. He learns of a dark secret in the house from his realtor, Alex. When he connects with the entity in the house, he realizes there are inconsistencies in Alex' story.

What really happened that terrible night?

Toby is thrust into an emotional roller coaster, and you're sitting in the same seat. Will Toby learn how to live again without Anna?

The Ghost Between Us is a thrilling story of love, loss and hope with a perfect dose of paranormal suspense.

Book Excerpt

Chapter 6: The Forever House

We pulled into the Chimney Tops Picnic Area and parked near the creek. Alex had a cooler in her back seat and offered me a bottle of water before we sat on the picnic bench.

“So,” she began. “Tell me about your dream house.”

“Anna called it our Forever House.”

“Ok, then, Forever House it is. Tell me all about it. We’ll work out the details later, but for now, I just want to hear about your perfect Forever House.”

“Every time we talked about it, I imagined a large piece of property; like 4 acres or more. The area with the house will be clear enough to have a lush green lawn to tend to where all the mature trees are far enough away that, if they fall, they wouldn’t damage the house. I want a creek to flow through the property. It needs to be secluded. I want to sit outside and hear nature, not road noise.”

Alex feverishly wrote down every detail that I explained. I turned my eyes to the water cascading over the huge rocks and let my imagination take over.

“I want a stone patio with part of it enclosed as a four-season room and the rest of it open-faced, but still covered. The open part would have a fire pit and the enclosed part, a fireplace with a rocking chair. I want a covered front porch. I want French doors from the master bedroom that lead to a hot tub that can also be accessed from outside. I want a breakfast nook that faces East with floor to ceiling windows.”

Alex had stopped writing and looked at me without expression.

“What is it?” I asked.

She spoke softly, “Nothing.” She forced a tiny smile that only lifted the corner of her mouth. “Keep going.”

“I want a detached outbuilding that I could use for storage and a woodshop.”

She threw her pen down on the picnic table and said intently, “Where did you come from?”

The question wasn’t as surprising as the look she gave me. She seemed to look right through me.

“What do you mean?” I asked.

“I think I’ve heard enough. Before you explain any more, I have a place I think you’ll like.”

“Really? Is it similar to what I’m explaining at all?”

She laughed as she put her elbows on the table, folded her hand together and leaned toward me with an expression I couldn’t read.

“Toby,” she started and looked down at the table. “You’re explaining a property that’s been on the market for almost a year now. It’s well kept, and the house has been maintained. Can I show you?”
